Mission: Founded in 2007, the open access Journal for Social Action in Counseling and Psychology (JSACP) features 'engaged scholarship' and the very important social change work done by mental health professionals and activists that would not normally find its way into publication. JSACP attempts to break down the divide between theory and practice in one of the most critical areas of our work: social transformation toward social and ecological justice and peace. JSACP publishes action-oriented articles, meaning manuscripts that discuss actual work (e.g., advocacy, activism, research, policy formulation and implementation, training, legislation) that has been conducted by the submitting author(s) and not proposed work or simple conceptualizations of issues. JSACP features four sections: Activism and Advocacy; Policy and Theory; Education and Training; and Program Development and Evaluation.

How to submit and costs? Articles submitted to JSACP are subjected to masked review. To submit an article and learn more about JSACP, visit: https://openjournals.bsu.edu/jsacp. JSACP accepts around 20% of the articles submitted. As a fully open access journal, all articles are available free of charge on the JSACP website, and there are no submission fees.
